Hope to Home

OVERVIEW

With over 1.5 million refugees with the majority originating from the Democratic Republic of Congo and South Sudan, Uganda is faced with a challenge of accommodating and integrating these diverse populations while ensuring their basic needs are met. These flee conflict and instability in search of safety. Despite the country's progressive policies that grant refugees the right to work, own property, and access social services, gaps about providing essential resources such as shelter, clean water, and livelihood support still exist.

In a bid towards addressing the complex shelter and livelihood needs of refugees and host communities, CRS in partnership with Caritas Hoima are implementing a three-year Hope to Home project in Kyangwali refugee settlement. The project goal is to reduce the vulnerability of refugees and host community families by supporting them to establish safe, dignified, healthy and durable homes and productive livelihoods, while engaging in collective actions that foster healthy, resilient relationships. This shall be through nurturing the foundations of vibrant and cohesive societies approaches.

PROJECT COMPONENTS

1. Shelter Programming

Using an owner-driven approach, the project intends to build homes for 1,071 families (5,355 individuals) who are extremely vulnerable including unaccompanied children, child headed households, teenage mothers, pregnant and lactating mothers, elderly people, and people with chronic illness.

2. Livelihood Support

Project intends to establish 80 Savings and Internal Lending Communities (SILC) groups with 25 members each on average totaling to 2,000 individuals. Through the SILC methodology, the project will prioritize participants in the shelter programming component. Beside facilitating their saving and loans systems, these group's members will undergo a business-skills training to learn how to better manage their resources through business and financial management skills.

3. Social Cohesion

The project brings conflicting parties together to work for the common good by raising awareness, engaging the community on specific issues, developing, and implementing connecting activities. Social Cohesion will be integrated in this project activities to enhance the outcomes of the program by building the capacity of the project team to enhance their understanding of CRS's social cohesion methodology and conceptual framework.
