Catholic Relief Services Mission Statement

Catholic Relief Services carries out the commitment of the Bishops of the United States to assist the poor and vulnerable overseas. We are motivated by the Gospel of Jesus Christ to cherish, preserve and uphold the sacredness and dignity of all human life, foster charity and justice, and embody Catholic social and moral teaching as we act to:

- Promote human development by responding to major emergencies, fighting disease and poverty, and nurturing peaceful and just societies; and,
- Serve Catholics in the United States as they live their faith in solidarity with their brothers and sisters around the world.

As part of the universal mission of the Catholic Church, we work with local, national and international Catholic institutions and structures, as well as other organizations, to assist people on the basis of need, not creed, race or nationality.

Approved by the Catholic Relief Services Board of Directors on September 11, 2008.

From the cover: This word cloud was derived from a speech given by Pope Benedict XVI for the celebration of the World Day of Peace, January 1, 2009, entitled “Fighting Poverty to Build Peace.” The more often the pope used a word in his speech, the larger it appears.

De la contratapa: esta nube de palabras salió de un discurso dado por el Papa Benedicto XVI con motivo de la celebración del Día Mundial de la Paz el 1º de enero de 2009, titulado “Combatir la pobreza, construir la paz.” Las palabras que aparecen más grandes son las que fueron utilizadas con más frecuencia por Su Santidad.
Dear Friend,

In 2009, we all faced tough times. The continuing global financial crisis immeasurably increased the suffering of the desperately poor and vulnerable families of the world. The cost of food and fuel, combined with the decline in the value of the dollar and decreased private contributions, also made Catholic Relief Services’ work more challenging.

The crisis affected Americans as well, but we also discovered a silver lining: Although private donations decreased, the number of supporters who contacted us through phone calls, letters and e-mail actually grew. Faithful donors who had given to us over the years continued to value their relationships with the poor overseas through CRS. We are truly blessed.

In fiscal year 2009, CRS continued to extend our reach. Our HIV and AIDS programs directly served more than 8 million people this year. And we are mounting other health initiatives, including distributing 2.8 million insecticide-treated mosquito nets that will help stop the spread of malaria in Niger, thanks to a grant from the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria.

We responded to several emergencies, such as drought in Kenya, flooding in Burkina Faso, and a string of disasters in Asia and the Pacific region: typhoons in the Philippines and Vietnam, an earthquake in Indonesia, a tsunami in Samoa and Tonga, and monsoon flooding in India. We also continued to serve people affected by ongoing violence in Sudan, Zimbabwe, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Sri Lanka, Pakistan and Afghanistan.

This year saw the completion of our five-year Indian Ocean tsunami rebuilding and recovery effort. This incredible gesture of solidarity on the part of the American people has accomplished a great deal. CRS renovated or built more than 13,000 permanent homes in India, Indonesia and Sri Lanka. In Aceh province, Indonesia, we worked on more than 300 community infrastructure projects, including the reconstruction of a health clinic and the construction of a Mother and Child Hospital in Banda Aceh, a full-service facility that is the first of its kind in the region.

Thanks to the generosity of the Catholic community, our private support in the 2009 fiscal year totaled $156 million, which helped leverage an additional $625 million in resources from the U.S. government and other organizations and ultimately benefited nearly 130 million people. Our program expenses totaled $768 million, marking the first time our programming exceeded the $700-million mark.

Thank you for your steadfast support of our mission and for your solidarity with our human family around the world.

Ken Hackett
President
Dear Friend,

Since it was founded in 1943, Catholic Relief Services has carried out the commitment of the Catholic bishops of the United States to extend a hand of help and hope to our brothers and sisters living in poverty around the world. It is our mission to help the Church fulfill its duty of charity, as described by Pope Benedict XVI in his encyclical “Deus Caritas Est” (“God is Love”): “The Church cannot neglect the service of charity any more than she can neglect the Sacraments and the Word.”

As you leaf through the pages of this annual report, you will see the fruit borne of that commitment.

One very happy occurrence this past year is that I was appointed Archbishop of New York. There is a very close historic connection between our archdiocese and CRS, which was headquartered in New York for 46 years—some of them at the Catholic Center where I now have my offices—before moving to Baltimore in 1989. I am pleased to help maintain this historic link between New York and CRS.

Yours in Christ,

Most Reverend Timothy M. Dolan
Archbishop of New York
Chairman of the Board

On January 12, 2010, the world watched in horror as Haiti experienced a calamitous earthquake. Thanks to the overwhelming generosity of many millions of supporters across the United States, CRS was able to respond immediately to save lives and help the people of Haiti begin their long journey toward a better future.

For updates on our progress, visit crs.org. More complete information will be included in our 2010 annual report. Thank you for your generosity, your compassion and your prayers.
The massive flooding that resulted killed more than 200 people and forced hundreds of thousands to flee their homes. Evacuees ended up sleeping in gymnasiums, schools and other public areas. Many of those who were able to return home found that most of their possessions had been destroyed. Catholic Relief Services and our partner, Caritas Philippines, immediately began reaching out to flood survivors. Hundreds of volunteers—often Catholic teens and college students—helped pack food and clothing for distribution to the people affected.

Assisting people displaced by natural disasters or armed conflict remains an important focus for us. Whether it's providing relief and shelter to flood survivors in the Philippines, helping people displaced by fighting in Pakistan's Swat Valley, or responding to the drought in Ethiopia this year—using the aid of the U.S. Agency for International Development's Food for Peace program to reach tens of thousands of people at risk with $150 million in food—CRS seeks to protect the dignity and basic human rights of all people.

Responding to disasters is just part of the picture. The other part is helping communities prepare for them. We recognize the importance of investing in emergency preparedness. Part of our mission is to help communities develop emergency plans so that they can make decisions that help lessen the devastation of a natural or man-made disaster. We help communities to craft response plans that involve everyone. We work with them to understand the nature of the disaster, to create early warning systems and to organize a collective response. Why? Because being prepared for emergencies saves lives.

In September 2009, we saw this young resident of the Philippines slogging through the streets in a province outside of Manila five days after Typhoon Ketsana struck.

As the sunrise peeks over a Mexican hillside community, Patricio Felix grabs a plastic container filled with more than 1,200 handmade tortillas and heads out to distribute them to local stores.

What used to take five hours on foot now takes a little less than an hour, thanks to the car Patricio purchased with the profits his family made selling tortillas.

As it did in much of the world, the economic crisis hit Patricio’s Sonoran community hard. U.S.-owned factories closed their doors, leaving thousands of households without a primary source of income. Many of the unemployed are women and single mothers. Patricio lost his job as a factory security guard and his wife, Guadalupe, lost her job at the plastics company.

Catholic Relief Services Mexico launched a microfinance project, EnComun de la Frontera (Common Good on the Border), to provide working capital and financial services to 6,500 displaced workers along the Mexican border and help them build up their small businesses.

Building their business with this microfinance project has allowed Patricio and Guadalupe to purchase a dough mixer. Now they can make more tortillas, close to 2,400 a day, which they sell for 85 cents to $1 per dozen.

CRS provides people around the world with the necessary tools to build their own bright futures. The recently launched Tubaramure (Let’s Help Them Grow) project in food-scarce Burundi—where malnutrition is common—will provide more than 102,000 expectant mothers and their young children with a complete diet, pre- and postnatal care, and classes on how to use local foods for better nutritional results.

The first two years of life are crucial to growth of brain and body. These formative years reach beyond childhood and have a direct impact on a person’s health and achievement as an adult. The United Nations reports that 46 percent of Burundian children under 5 suffer from stunted growth as a result of long-term malnutrition. Through the Tubaramure project, funded by the U.S. Agency for International Development, CRS is working to ensure that these children receive the nutritional support they need to reach their highest potential.

For most of us, access to water means turning on a faucet. Not so for the women of the village of Rhoka in Kenya.

Getting water there meant skirting the possibility of a crocodile attack on a long walk that was getting longer all the time as the drought in East Africa took hold. In 2009, Catholic Relief Services worked through the Catholic Diocese of Garissa to build two wells, each with a hand pump, as part of the Global Water Initiative efforts funded by the Howard G. Buffett Foundation.

“We used to walk under the scorching sun all day long in search of water,” resident Amina Diney says. “Now it takes just 15 minutes for women to get water.”

This is just one of the many CRS projects to aid some of the 30 million people across the Horn of Africa threatened by this drought. Beyond East Africa, we brought water purification tools to cholera-ravaged areas of Zimbabwe and irrigation systems to rice growers in Madagascar.

Too much water brings its own problems, including disease when it acts as a breeding ground for mosquitoes that carry malaria. CRS and partners distributed 2.8 million insecticide-treated mosquito nets in Niger, with support from the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria. In five years, the program aims to have 80 percent of children younger than 5 and pregnant women sleeping under the nets.

Back in East Africa, a CRS-donated drilling rig was used by an Ethiopian Catholic Church partner to drill a borehole in Dire Dawa, an arid district in eastern Ethiopia. It provides 2,400 households with clean water.

The Secretary-General of the Ethiopian Catholic Secretariat, Abba Hagos Hayish, toured some of the communities benefiting from this work. He asked a Muslim woman filling a 5-gallon jug with water from one of the system’s taps if she knew who was responsible for the project.

“They call themselves Catholics,” she said. “I’m not sure exactly what that means, but we give thanks to God for their work.”

In the remote places we work, clean water means health, productivity and a new way of life.
Tausi Rashidi had not been well. After hearing a radio program, she went for a test. She barely remembers her walk home from the clinic. “I was so distracted, I was almost run down.”

Tausi hid her HIV from her husband and three daughters for six months. But she began losing weight. Her skin was covered with boils. “The neighbors were talking about me,” she recalls.

Tausi’s friend volunteered for the Mwanza Outreach Group, a Catholic Relief Services partner in Tanzania that provides home-based care. She suggested that Tausi go to the center. As it turns out, that was a lifesaving suggestion. “I didn’t know there were people in the world who could love me like that,” Tausi says.

CRS and our partners understand that helping those with HIV does not mean just handing them medicine. It means a continuum of care that follows patients throughout their lives, ensuring they adhere to their drug regimens, counseling them about their challenges, teaching them what they need to know not just to stay alive, but to thrive.

Through the Mwanza group, Tausi began receiving food and potent vitamins. On home visits, she was provided counseling, taught healthful food preparation and given information about HIV transmission.

After a year, Tausi started the antiretroviral treatment then being introduced in Tanzania through the U.S.-funded President’s Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief (PEPFAR). A member of the AIDSRelief consortium since it started in 2003, CRS provides a wide spectrum of care, including antiretroviral treatment, in 10 countries. Since the program began, AIDSRelief has helped more than 450,000 people with HIV, including 175,000 who received antiretroviral treatment last year. CRS also brought help to more than 650,000 children orphaned or made vulnerable by HIV.

Tausi has personally experienced the “Lazarus effect” of antiretroviral therapy. With her newfound energy, and her appreciation for the help she received, Tausi volunteers at the Mwanza Outreach Group, offering her support to others with HIV.

Asked how she feels now, she doesn’t hesitate to answer. “I have plenty of peace,” Tausi says. “I am doing fine.”

After starting antiretroviral medications, Tausi Rashidi regained her zest for life. She now volunteers to help others in northwestern Tanzania.

The rains can linger in Vietnam’s Mekong Delta, and during the wet season a raging torrent would often separate the children of Hoa Binh from their school.

The children had two options to reach their school: Risk the flimsy bamboo “monkey bridge” which spanned the canal or walk several miles to a safe crossing. Working with the local community, Catholic Relief Services funded the construction of a permanent, safe bridge. Now the path to their education, their future, is clear for the children of Hoa Binh.

The bridge stands as a symbol of CRS’ work in education with both children and adults. We work to overcome the obstacles that stand in the way of learning and opportunity. In India, CRS supports “bridge” schools, which help children who have missed out on classes catch up so they can re-enter public school. Bridge schools can be crucial in rural Indian villages, where many children are forced to leave school early for work or marriage. Pushpa was just 11 years old when she was married to her 25-year-old cousin. “I didn’t know what marriage was,” recalls Pushpa, “I was sad. After 10 days of marriage I ran away.”

Pushpa found refuge at a bridge school supported by CRS and our partner, the Mamidipudi Venkatarangaiya Foundation (MVF). She had gone to the school in the past and knew that she would be safe. Pushpa’s parents talked with her in-laws and the family agreed to let her leave the marriage. But “if there were no MVF” says Pushpa, now 19, “I’d still be there.”

In Peru, education can provide a bridge to a better future for the country’s so-called “street children.” Each day, poor families have to choose whether to send their children to school or out to earn money. School often loses out, and working children can be exposed to abuse and mistreatment. Christian Cooperation for Development centers, funded by CRS, offer a way out. Children between 7 and 17 get tutoring, two meals a day, school supplies, health education and mentoring, all in a family-like atmosphere.

This CRS-constructed bridge helps the children of Hoa Binh primary school in Vietnam get to their classes.

Thousands of Moldovans have left their homeland to look for work abroad. Though many find safe jobs, others, especially young women, become prey for human traffickers.

Marina was one of those whose job prospects were grim. The young mother, whose husband had died of pneumonia, had to support her 3-year-old twins. Then her mother saw an ad in the local paper for a CRS-sponsored jobs training program. “I still can’t believe how lucky I was to be accepted into this project,” says Marina, who now works at a large grocery store. “In addition to technical skills, I also learned that we are all equal; I learned how to behave with difficult customers and how to avoid conflicts.” She learned financial skills, gaining confidence and the promise of a peaceful life with her family in Moldova. “If I had gone abroad, I wouldn’t have seen my kids much. They may not have remembered the face of their mother.”

Sometimes the road to peace has many detours, as it has had in the Middle East. When fighting erupted between Israel and Hamas, Catholic Relief Services responded swiftly to provide nearly 1,500 Gazan families with food, hygiene items, basic medical supplies and other essentials. Despite worsening conditions in Gaza throughout 2009, CRS distributed necessities such as cooking pots, food and clothing for nearly 20,000 families, and provided counseling and social services for 2,000 Gazans.

Amani means “peace” in Kenya. Two years after this usually peaceful nation erupted in violence following a disputed presidential election, amani is slowly growing on soccer fields, in youth peace clubs, in environmental protection groups and at cultural events supported by CRS in local parishes. Recently, a newly formed adult peace club planted trees to recognize the growing amani among people living in Kariobangi Parish outside of Nairobi. CRS partners from Caritas Nairobi and the government chief joined in the festivities, helping to further pave new roads to peace.

When Monsignor Joe Ciampaglio speaks at parishes he’s visiting, he often shares a moment from his visit to Guatemala.

“While stopped at a traffic light, I watched from the van as a young boy carrying a huge bundle of greens on his back struggled beside his mother, who walked holding a baby and balancing a large sack on her head. Each time the boy stumbled, his mother grabbed his hand to lift him up.”

For Monsignor Ciampaglio, the vision of this boy serves as a metaphor for the call to reach out and lift people out from under their heavy burdens. The monsignor, from the Diocese of Paterson, New Jersey, is a CRS Global Fellow—one of a group of priests and seminarians who travel overseas with CRS and share their stories with parishes across the United States when they return.

While CRS helps families in impoverished communities overseas, the agency is truly an ambassador for Catholics in the United States, who are the hands of hope for millions of people around the world.

Generations of Catholics embrace Operation Rice Bowl each year as their Lenten practice of fasting, praying and almsgiving to help the poor. In 34 years, a total of $167 million has been collected through Operation Rice Bowl, with 75 percent of program funding going to CRS’ global programs to improve people’s ability to feed themselves. Twenty-five percent of funding remains in home dioceses for local projects assisting people in need.

Students at Cabrini College in Philadelphia have discovered that hope can be served up in a cup of coffee. To promote fair trade coffee on campus, they worked with the dining services operator to purchase coffee from Peace Coffee, a U.S.-based CRS partner that supplies coffee grown by a Guatemalan farmers’ cooperative. Two years ago, this same cooperative received a grant from the CRS Fair Trade Fund to upgrade its coffee roasting equipment, and today, students know their commitment at home made the difference for farmers and their families in Guatemala.

We gratefully acknowledge the individuals, organizations, foundations and corporations who supported our work with $10,000 or more in fiscal year 2009. We also extend our deepest thanks to thousands of others for their steadfast and continuous support of our work. Their concern for those less fortunate is demonstrated every year by their gifts to the Catholic Relief Services Collection and to Operation Rice Bowl, and by their continuing support of all our programs. Their generosity helps make it possible for us to alleviate human suffering and provide assistance to the world’s poor.

The compilers have carefully reviewed the names that are listed. Donors are recognized for gifts made during Fiscal Year 2009: October 1, 2008—September 30, 2009. If a name has been listed incorrectly or has been omitted, please accept our apologies and bring the mistake to the attention of:

Ambassadors of Hope

Catholic Relief Services was born in 1943 through the compassion and generosity of countless American Catholics. In 2007, we announced another milestone in our history—the establishment of the Ambassadors of Hope Circle to recognize our most generous patrons. The extraordinary philanthropy of Ambassadors of Hope Circle members is a testament to the power of sharing God’s bounty of love with those in greatest need around the globe.

In Our Thoughts and Prayers

Catholic Relief Services lost a dear friend and colleague in July. Mark Snyder joined CRS in November 1993.

Four years ago, Mark Snyder took on an especially complex and sensitive assignment as country representative for Sudan, one of CRS’ most challenging operating environments. Mark contracted malaria in Sudan and died of complications from the illness. Our prayers are with Mark and his family.
