We Share the Responsibility of Long-term Impact and Sustainable Transformation on a Global Level

Grounded, empowered and moved by our Catholic faith—and with Catholic teaching as our guide—our work knows no bounds. We go where we are called, to the most remote places, to achieve the greatest impact, alongside the world's most vulnerable people. Bold and ambitious, we will not stop until all of God's children can fulfill their God-given potential in thriving families and communities, in just, peaceful and vibrant societies, and in flourishing landscapes.

Our Mission

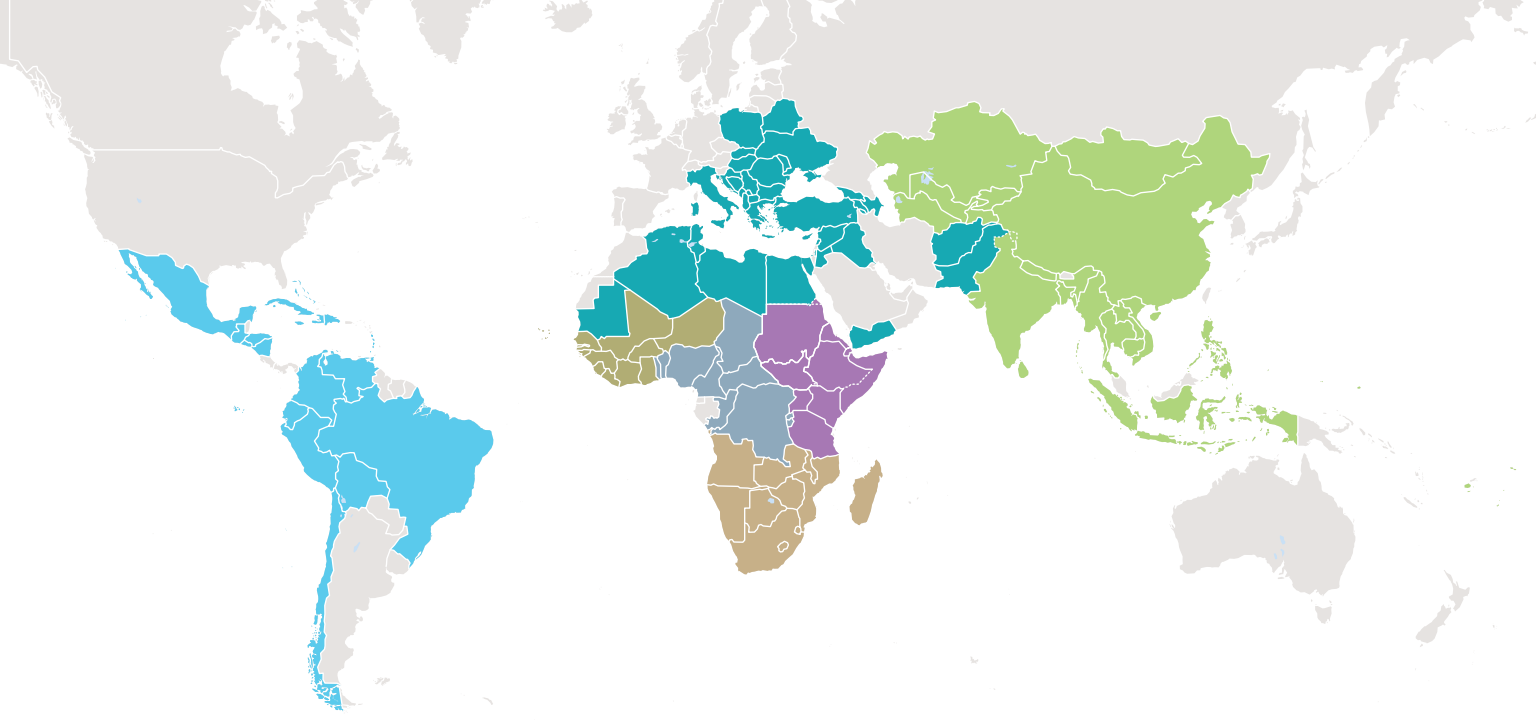

Catholic Relief Services carries out the commitment of the Bishops of the United States to assist the poor and vulnerable overseas. We are motivated by the Gospel of Jesus Christ to cherish, preserve and uphold the sacredness and dignity of all human life, foster charity and justice, and embody Catholic social and moral teaching as we act to:

PROMOTE HUMAN DEVELOPMENT by responding to major emergencies, fighting disease and poverty, and nurturing peaceful and just societies.

SERVE CATHOLICS IN THE UNITED STATES as they live their faith in solidarity with their brothers and sisters around the world.

As part of the universal mission of the Catholic Church, we work with local, national and international Catholic institutions and structures, as well as other organizations, to assist people on the basis of need, not creed, race or nationality.

Approved by the Catholic Relief Services Board of Directors on September 11, 2008.

Boundless Commitment to Our Gospel Mission

At Catholic Relief Services, we have bold aspirations: to save lives and alleviate suffering, accelerate the end of poverty, hunger, and preventable disease, and to cultivate just and peaceful societies. In short, we want to be a catalyst for positive change in the world. Since 1943, we have been tireless in our commitment to the needs of vulnerable people around the globe. As a leading international humanitarian agency, guided by faith, we work in solidarity with our partners to uphold the dignity of all God’s children, and to pave the way to peace and prosperity.

Letters from our Board Chair and President & CEO

Welcoming refugees who leave home because of armed conflict. Building resilience in families who grieve in the aftermath of COVID-19. Offering solutions to farmers whose livelihoods are challenged by the changing climate. This is the work inspired by our Catholic faith—work that gives hope and rebuilds communities.

For 80 years, Catholic Relief Services has been dedicated to fostering true justice and lasting peace by calling attention to the world's most pressing issues, embracing innovation, and cultivating partnerships to create the kind of change that transforms people's lives.

In 2019, when I became CRS' new board chairman, I told our staff that the work of CRS brings light wherever there is darkness. As I finish my tenure and welcome incoming chairman, Most Reverend Nelson J. Pérez, Archbishop of Philadelphia, I am grateful for that light that continues to shine thanks to the support of so many—our donors and volunteers, parishes, governments, religious organizations, and nonprofits. You are living proof of God's grace in answering the Gospel call to uphold the dignity of people in need. Thank you.

God bless you,

Most Rev. Frank J. Caggiano, Bishop of Bridgeport

Chair, CRS Board of Directors | November 2019 to November 2022

In 2022, CRS, together with our local partners and supporters, reached over 250 million people with assistance and services. In keeping with our strategy, In Their Own Hands, we were able to respond to the suffering in the wake of violent conflict, the devastation of natural disasters, and the complexities and harshness of poverty to fulfill our commitment to uphold the human dignity of all God's children.

We are filled with hope, gratitude, and faith as we reflect on the accomplishments we achieved by working in communion with our sisters and brothers around the world. Though there are many challenges in the world, we see daily the transformation of families and communities through expressions of love and investments in their talents and opportunities.

As we look to the horizon, we see injustice, environmental degradation, and a loss of community, but we also see people of goodwill joining together, to save, protect, and transform lives. We strengthen our resolve by living our faith in our actions and deeds, and we recognize that alone we cannot be successful; though together our faith knows no bounds.

Peace and light,

Ambitious Goals, Record Impact

In a world facing the serious consequences of violence, natural disasters, poverty, and disease, CRS and our partners and supporters bring lifesaving and life affirming support aid to where it is needed most. In 2022, our efforts reached more than 255 million people across 122 countries. CRS is on the ground, living our faith through our work. From supporting refugees who have fled conflict in places like Ukraine to addressing the hunger crisis in East Africa, and from finding farming solutions in Central America's dry corridor to sowing the seeds of peace wherever it is absent—CRS is committed to building a better world.

Global Results

Introduced in 2020, CRS Global Results demonstrate how each program, country and region contributes to our global impact, making our process transparent and accountable. These numbers allow us to measure how we are achieving desired outcomes and how our work across all programs adds up to transformational change at scale.

Refugees Build Community in Egypt

An atmosphere of division and distrust pervades the area of Ain Shams, an economically vulnerable neighborhood in Cairo with one of Egypt's highest concentrations of refugees. Hundreds of thousands from Sudan and South Sudan have found refuge in Egypt but remain segregated from their host community in daily activities and educational settings, adding to tensions.

CRS works to decrease these divisions by supporting refugees and Egyptian host community members to build relationships of mutual trust. In the Ain Shams neighborhood, CRS has helped South Sudanese students and their parents access safe and quality education opportunities through a process called binding, bonding and bridging.

Integrating social and educational activities has allowed refugees and Egyptian host community members to deeply engage with one another. Young leaders have grown in resilience, becoming self-reliant members of their communities. Amid the challenges that accompany this changing environment, CRS remains committed to playing a significant role in establishing a more cohesive and peaceful society.

CRS supports refugees and Egyptian host community members to build relationships of mutual trust.

EDWARD, A MOLDOVAN RESIDENT

Since the Russian invasion of Ukraine in February 2022, Ukrainians have faced shortages of food, shelter and electricity, as they suffer increasing trauma and loss. More than 6 million people are displaced within the country, and more than 7 million have crossed the border into neighboring countries, where many residents have taken Ukrainians into their homes for a few days, nights, and even months.

“We are all together, like a big family,” says Edward, a Moldovan resident who has been hosting a Ukrainian mother and her daughter. “People don’t run away from good conditions. They run away from bad conditions and that’s why we have to help them.”

Almost 90% of refugees are women and children. Olga has found shelter in the house across the street from Edward. “At the moment, we only rest,” she says. “The only thing that was in our heads when we fled was to save the lives of our children.”

CRS supports Caritas partners in ten countries to aid displaced Ukrainians and refugees. Together, we can deliver comprehensive assistance to meet immediate needs and provide longer-term solutions—including support for those who are integrating elsewhere or returning home.

Says Edward, “I am ready to offer my full heart to those who need it.”

GOAL 3

ALL PEOPLE ACHIEVE DIGNIFIED AND RESILIENT LIVELIHOODS IN FLOURISHING LANDSCAPES

Building Resilience From the Ground Up

Today with all the soil samples, we are already seeing higher yields, and the harvests are more profitable.”

EULALIO AMAYA ORELLANA,
A FARMER IN HONDURAS

Rising temperatures, erratic rainfall patterns and recurrent drought have pounded the Dry Corridor, a strip of territory that runs through Guatemala, El Salvador, Honduras and Nicaragua, depleting harvests and leaving millions hungry in recent years.

In Honduras, Eulalio Amaya Orellana, a farmer and father of five children, has struggled to provide food for his family in the face of climate change.

“The summers are very strong,” he says. “I planted but I could not harvest due to a lack of water. The temperatures dried out our plants.”

CRS has worked with local partners to implement Restorative Agriculture in Critical Ecosystems (RAÍCES), a project funded by the U.S. Agency for International Development with the aim to help farmers build resilience. For Eulalio, that resilience starts with protecting his most vital resources: soil and water.

With the help of RAÍCES, Eulalio built a water reservoir and drip irrigation system. This has allowed him to start farming vegetables that require more water to grow—such as cucumber, celery, parsley and watermelon—but fetch a better price.

The project has also connected Eulalio to a local government association that buys food for school meals from local vendors.

Jesús Martínez, an agronomist with an implementing partner, says, “Linking small-scale farmers to markets not only reduces rural poverty and hunger, it’s key for long-term resilience.”

After her husband died of COVID-19, Sruti considered sending her young daughter to an orphanage in India. Thanks to support from a CRS project focused on preventing the separation of children and families, they were able to stay together.

GOAL 4

ALL CHILDREN REACH THEIR FULL HEALTH AND DEVELOPMENT POTENTIAL IN SAFE AND NURTURING FAMILIES

Strengthening Families in COVID-19's Aftermath

157,021

children living in safe and nurturing families

With millions of caregivers lost to COVID-19 in India, Sruti and her children Swati and Bhaskar were not alone in struggling to face each new day, shaped by grief.

When Sruti's 4-year-old daughter was a baby, Sruti's husband, Anil, worked for a private company while Sruti cared for their two young children.

Then in May 2021, Anil contracted COVID-19, went to the hospital for care and never returned home.

The family was left in a precarious financial situation in the face of their heart-rending loss. Sruti was terrified she might need to send her children to an orphanage just to ensure they received adequate food and shelter.

Fortunately, as part of our emergency response, with support from CRS' Changing the Way We Care project and our partners in India, Sruti could continue caring for her children in their home.

Under this project, children who have lost one or both parents to COVID-19 receive financial assistance and food support. The cash and rations have kept families together.

I feel confident that someone is there for my family.”

During the COVID-19 pandemic, Sruti, a mother in India, relied on her resilience and the support of a CRS project to keep her family together after the death of her husband from COVID.

The project had taught me everything, and I plan to train other young people to make this activity sustainable.”

HAOUAOU HAROU, A MOTHER IN NIGER

Haouaou Harou, a 26-year-old mother, could barely meet her daily financial needs. But Haouaou had been nourishing a longtime passion for building a plant nursery—work she saw her father doing since she was young. So, when she was selected in 2020 to be part of an entrepreneurship project which offers young people training in various agricultural areas, she knew she would seek training in plant nurseries and grafting.

The “Work Ready Now!” and “Be Your Own Boss” trainings are part of the Girma project, funded by the U.S. Agency for International Development and developed by Girma’s partner, the Education Development Center. It trains young people in the development of life skills, literacy and community services.

After the training, Haouaou established her nursery. And she encouraged other young people—especially young girls—to embrace this work.

“At first, I thought nursery work is men’s profession, but I come to know that women can do it too,” she says. “Thanks to this activity, I satisfy my needs, help my husband and my mother while taking care of my child. With my savings, I was able to buy three goats worth $80 and join a savings group where I save 35 cents every week.”

Participants and their trainers gather as part of a CRS entrepreneurship project for young people in Icrisat, Sadoré, Niger. Through youth employment activities, the project helps to reduce unemployment and empowers young people to support themselves, their families and their communities.

Building a movement of millions to transform the world

I was advocating for real people in real moments of crisis in real places of need, whose well-being depends upon the concrete action of the global community now.”

FATHER JOE GRADY

Guided by our Catholic faith, CRS is building a movement of passionate individuals in the United States to work alongside us to cultivate more just and peaceful societies that respect the dignity of every person and the integrity of creation.

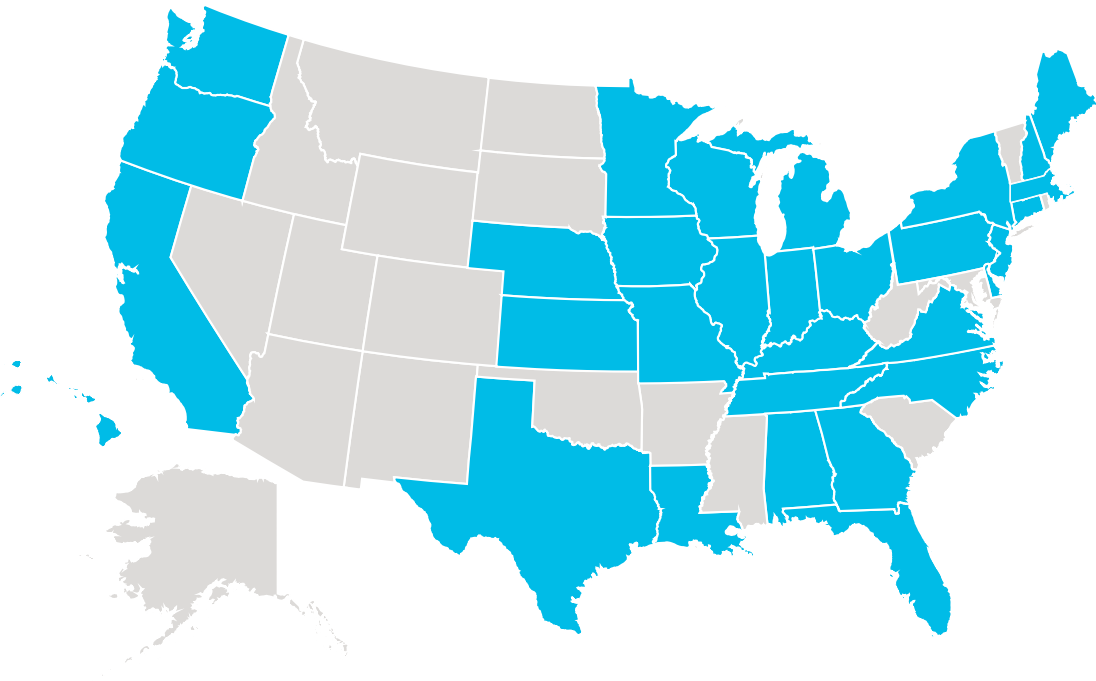

In fiscal year 2022, we focused on inspiring individuals—through our migration and hunger campaigns—to live out their Gospel call and respond to the needs of our global family. With CRS Chapters and Clubs, national partners and individual supporters—who engage in fundraising, writing letters to editors, and emailing, calling and meeting with policy makers—we carry on CRS’ mission across the United States. And we have seen the impact of these champions reflected in their ability to influence Congress to advance laws and policies and mobilize change through private funding.

Over the last year, the faithful advocacy of tens of thousands of people has contributed to Congress passing—and the president signing—the fiscal year 2022 federal budget, in which we saw an increase in funding for poverty-focused international humanitarian and development accounts, and over $5 billion in funding for humanitarian and food security needs for Ukraine and other countries impacted by the war. Supporters also urged Congress to prioritize several other pieces of legislation—set to be voted on in fiscal year 2023—including the Global Food Security Reauthorization Act and the Farm Bill.

A Community Of Changemakers

Catholic Relief Services is building a national network of CRS Chapters and Clubs to mobilize Catholics and others of goodwill to end global poverty. These chapters and clubs—comprised of parishioners, diocesan groups, university and high school students and other community members—are taking critical and meaningful actions to address global poverty and advocate on behalf of our global family. Engaging in CRS Chapters and Clubs empowers people to live out their call as missionary disciples and become champions for the families and communities that CRS serves.

Members learn about important humanitarian issues; develop essential skills in leadership, advocacy fundraising and community engagement; and receive specialized training and support from CRS staff. Chapters and clubs are connected to one another through regional, state, and national networks, magnifying their impact to advance policy changes for a more just and peaceful world.
