Adapted from: Lee A, Newman S, Pasztor G, Sutton K. Protection Mainstreaming Training Package. Global Protection Cluster; 2014.

Ask the woman if she is hurt.	Ask for details of what happened.
Ask survivor for details of when and where it happened.	Ask who is responsible for attacking her.
Ask what specific help/assistance she needs. Ask if she wants you to contact someone to get support or help.	Give the person contact information for health, counselling, or other relevant services.
Don't say anything at the time, but later call the police from somewhere private.	Report the incident to your manager or protection staff member and ask for advice.
Do nothing if it is a domestic or family/community matter.	Check safety: your safety, the safety of other staff members and the safety of the affected person and the community.
